John Mann

"Coffee has been a constant in my life since college. I grew up with diner coffee, and still remember my first espresso drink at O'Hare. But after traveling to the rugged mountains of Guatemala, I'm hooked on the rich roasted coffee grown around Lake Atitlan."

waking up, trying to convince myself I don't need caffeine, realizing that my day would be so much better with it, and running to my parents overengineered espresso machine. Then, I make 4 espresso shots, throw those into an ice-filled cup, and drink that until I can't hear myself think anymore."

coffee to start my day off right. I usually make it until about 2 or 3 in the afternoon, and then I have more caffeine to make the rest of my day better."

Ryan O'Meara

"I'm definitely drinking coffee throughout the day, and drinking it outside makes it all the better. Especially when it's a cup of Sunken City Coffee from Guatemala."

Sean Grogan

"My morning routine consists of dragging myself out of bed, overviewing the day and my goals for it, overthinking everything, and realizing the fog my brain is in would disappear with a nice cup of joe. That leads me to the kitchen where I indulge in some imported (Guatemalan if I'm lucky) coffee and get my day started from there."

Kassidy Chan

"I set at least 10 alarms each morning, but nothing wakes me up faster than the smell of coffee. The best way to start the day is a freshly-brewed cup of coffee that smells and tastes good."
